About the course

The NEP 2020 (para 4.12) emphasizes that “young children learn languages extremely quickly between the ages of 2-8 and multilingualism has great cognitive benefits” (NEP 2020; p.13). With this in mind, the policy encourages introducing second language¹ learning early on, tapping into children's natural ability to acquire languages with ease. In India, where multiple languages coexist, learning a second language not only strengthens national unity but also fosters respect for cultural diversity and enhances communication among different linguistic groups.

Moreover, learning a second language contributes to academic success across various subjects. Studies show that students who are fluent in more than one language tend to have better cognitive control, improved literacy skills, and stronger problem-solving abilities. Specifically, acquiring a second language boosts metalinguistic awareness, which helps students analyze and understand the structures of their first language more effectively. This aligns with the broader goals of foundational literacy and numeracy as outlined in the National Curriculum Framework for Foundational Stage (NCF-FS) 2022.

The NEP 2020 strongly supports using the home language or mother tongue as the main medium of instruction during the foundational years while also introducing a second language in a fun and relevant way. This calls for creative teaching methods that incorporate storytelling, visual aids, interactive activities, and meaningful real-life interactions into second language instruction.

A well-designed second language curriculum should take into account the diverse linguistic backgrounds of students and provide supportive learning experiences that help them gradually build proficiency. Teachers are key in this process, as they create an inclusive language environment, use interactive teaching methods, and respect the linguistic diversity in their classrooms. The National Curriculum Framework for Foundational Stage (2022) emphasizes that “Children should be exposed to and immersed in multiple oral languages (also referred to as L-II and L- III below) from an early age. Schools will aim to ensure the presence of Teachers, and parents so that at least two or preferably three languages present with children on a regular basis. ... Exposure to multiple languages in oral form can also provide significant cognitive stimulation to the child that is beneficial, including the development of creativity and critical- thinking abilities, in addition to socio-emotional skills, as sounds and gestures by Teachers, parents, peers, and others are transformed in a child's mind into words, phrases, and sentences" (NCF-FS 2022; p. 77). This underscores the need to make second language learning an enjoyable and immersive experience rather than a chore.

Additionally, the curriculum should align with the NEP 2020's call for preparing skilled language teachers who can effectively manage multilingual classrooms. Language teaching should go beyond traditional textbooks and embrace experiential learning, encouraging students to use the second language in meaningful, practical contexts. Some effective strategies include use of action songs, rhymes, fun games, short conversations in phrases and simple sentences (with the scaffold of real objects or pictures), adopting a multilingual approach where familiar stories are first told/read aloud by the teacher in L-I several times and can then be retold in L-II or L-III, using the target words and structures, and using stories and read-alouds with repetitive sentence structures (NCF-FS 2022; p.78). There should be a strong focus on oral proficiency, active listening, and interaction, ensuring that students feel confident using the second language for communication.

In summary, second language learning in Indian classrooms is crucial for a well-rounded education. It nurtures cognitive, social, and cultural skills, empowering students to thrive in a diverse and interconnected world. By aligning language education with research-based teaching methods and the principles of the NEP 2020 and NCF 2022, we can create an enriching multilingual learning environment that benefits students academically, socially, and cognitively.
